
Sustainable art project \"power of belief\"

Posted by Volantra - 2008/05/03 19:44

Hello everyone :)

Im working on an idea for an artwork for the Helix project and want the basis for the design to come form the people of the area or involved in the project.

I will later post the finished design of the project but for now I will keep it a surprise ;)

So I need the help of you wonderful people who have taken the time out to read this. Its just a bit of fun and your identity will be kept secret out with the forum. The idea is for me to start a story and for you to continue it and then the next person who comes along will continue from where you left off.

Think about mythological creatures (no kelpies please :)) and fairy tales and try and come up with a modern twist.

"In the dark depths of a forest their lived a small magical tree with bark made from bottles and"

I hope this works and you all join in and add a small part to the fairytale.

x

Re:Sustainable art project \"power of belief\"

Posted by Kathleen Marjoribanks - 2008/07/03 10:43

..made from bottles and oyster shells. Birds from the nearby Magpie woods descended on the tree and pecked furiously at the bark with its frilly petticoat shaped layers of shell and glassy surface. A young student from the college came through the woods feeling weary and confused about which direction to go. Suddenly a giant bird with eyes like black stones and claws like flint dropped on to the canopy of the tree. What do you want Fierce Bird? said the girl. And what did the bird want but....

Re:Sustainable art project \"power of belief\"

Posted by Sandy McMulloch - 2008/12/12 15:04

said the girl."Why Im a great big feirce hungry bird and if I sit up this tree much longer im worried I'll become an iconic peice of artwork,but hush" he said looking around. "Come closer Ill whisper the secret of my longevity in youre ear."The young student leaned forward expectantly"Patience is a virtue when hunting but did you know theres enough protein in youre brain to sustain me for another 5 months and one week?